7 FACTUAL ALLEGATIONS

8 20. At all times referenced herein, Respondent was employed as a pharmacy technician at 9 a San Diego Costco pharmacy. On or about November 18, 2013, the San Diego Field Office of 10 the Drug Enforcement Agency (DEA) received a request for assistance from a Costco 11 representative. The representative told DEA agents that Respondent had been videotaped on their 12 surveillance cameras stealing medications from their pharmacy during her work shift on 13 November 16, 2013. Costco loss prevention officers had confronted Respondent at the pharmacy
14 and she admitted stealing alprazolam as seen in the video. Inside Respondent's purse, loss 15 prevention officers recovered prescription bottles containing various quantities of controlled 16 substances as follows: 180 tablets of alprazolam, 52 tablets of temazepam, 71.5 tablets of 17 phentermine, and 39 tablets of uncontrolled medications. Respondent consented to allowing 18 Costco employees to enter her residence to obtain additional stolen medications she had stored 19 there. The DEA agents took custody of the drugs found in Respondent's purse. Under 20 questioning, Respondent told the DEA agents that she had recently started using alprazolam given 21 to her by a friend, and admitted she had been stealing small amounts of temazepam and 22 alprazolam from the pharmacy for the last several months. The DEA agents received 23 Respondent's consent to search her residence. While there, they recovered prescription bottles 24 containing various quantities of controlled substances as follows: 75 tablets of hydrocodone, 4 25 tablets of oxycodone, 6.5 tablets of alprazolam, 30 tablets of clonazepam, 33 tablets of 26 uncontrolled medications, and a sealed bottle of 30 tablets of Cialis. The bottle for clonazepam 27 contained a prescription label for another patient. One prescription bottle for alprazolam was 28 issued in November 2011 in Respondent's name. Respondent was transported to the DEA field

1 office where she then admitted she first tried alprazolam two years earlier. Respondent stated that 2 she entered false information into the prescription software at the Costco pharmacy to see if her 3 insurance would pay for the alprazolam, and she found that it would. She claimed that she 4 cancelled the prescription in the system and never filled it, but she did print a label for the bottle.
5 Respondent admitted that she printed the label and affixed it to the bottle so as to appear she had a 6 legitimate prescription for the stolen alprazolam. Respondent also admitted to stealing various 7 controlled and uncontrolled drugs from the pharmacy during her employment at Costco, including 8 the bottle of Cialis which she stole for a family member but had not yet given it to him.

9 Respondent was arrested by the DEA agents on November 18, 2013, and charged with violating 10 Health and Safety Code section 11350 (illegal possession of controlled substances), Health and 11 Safety Code section 11375 (illegal possession of designated controlled substances), and Penal 12 Code section 487 (grand theft).
