This recall has been initiated because of a potential for the content of some bottles to be below specification limits for the active ingredient. This drug product is indicated in the treatment of mild to moderately severe bacterial infections caused by penicillin-G sensitive microorganisms. The active ingredient below the specification limits for this drug product could result in an underdose of medication. Consequently, there may be a decrease in treatment effectiveness that may lead to persistence of infection, worsening of infection or bacterial resistance as well as diminished therapeutic response for medical conditions in which oral penicillin therapy is indicated as prophylaxis. The overall risk to patients taking this product are considered to be low. To date, Teva USA has received no reports for lack of efficacy or efficacy that is lower than expected.
